

ast started off the year by getting the crazy events of "welcome week" underway — september 11-15 . . . re-assembly meetings were every other thursday at 7:30 am, often too early for late risers . . . most of the time the sleepy-eyed executive council met every tuesday and thursday mornings to discuss the current events of the school . . . we registered the voters during lunches on the stage . . . most of executive council attended leadership camp, november 16-18, to help us run the year more smoothly . . . we sponsored lunch-time concerts early in the fall featuring Lympic and Rayburn . . . throughout the 18 days of the gift-wrapping booth, ast put in 600 shifts of hard work and effort . . .

we received $2,658 . . . ast paid for a self-image building assembly and seminar for 70 students — would have liked to have had more students attend . . . our directories came out late as usual . . . although our opinions may differ, we always unite for the benefit of the school

While working at the gift-wrapping booth, Lisa Wagner concentrates on getting it perfect.

The image-building seminar brought on a lot of deep thoughts for Dan Haynes, Kurt Tonnenmaker and Brian Boyce.
